AN ATTACK EXPECTED

Revolutionists Now Besieging Puerto Cabello.

The Consuls Organized and Elect the American Consul President.

VENEZUELA IN THE THROES

Washington, July 25.—The following cablegram has been received from Captain McLean of the cruiser Cincinnati, dated La Guayra:

"Information has been received from commander of the Topeka. Attack is expected at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela.

"A meeting of the foreign consuls has elected the American consul president of the conference. Marietta at Cumana, Venezuela. Carupano quiet; no indications blockade; revolutionary forces control Carupano. The president of Venezuela remains at Barcelona. The Falke and Koenigen Regente is at Puerto Cabello. Gazelle and Suchet here."

TWO THOUSAND REBELS.

Willemstad, Island of Curacao, July 25.—Advices received here from Venezuela show that for the 48 hours previous to the departure of the vessel which brought the news Puerto Cabello had been surrounded by 2,000 revolutionists, who appeared and disappeared as if engaged in some extraordinary tactics. All the stores in the town were closed and the inhabitants were apprehending an attack on the place. The United States cruiser Topeka, the French cruiser Regente and the German cruiser Falke had arrived at Puerto Cabello to protect foreign interests.

MACHIAS AND MARIETTA.

Washington, July 25.—The gunboat Machias, which was ordered to Cape Haytien at the request of Minister Livingstone, who reported to the state department that the situation there was such as to demand the immediate presence of an American warship, sailed yesterday from Colon for that port. Inasmuch as our treaty obligations compel the United States to keep transit of the isthmus open and the disturbed condition of affairs at Panama constantly threatens interruption of traffic, the Marietta also has been ordered to proceed on her way thither at the earliest possible moment.

MUCH INTEREST.

The Big Suit to Stop the Transfer Boat Freely Discussed.

Some Think the Railroad Can be Stopped from Hauling Passengers.

The big suits of Messrs. James and Robert Owen against the Illinois Central company to enjoin it from longer running its transfer boat, the Osborne, have aroused a great deal of discussion, especially in legal circles. Some attorneys express themselves as believing that the railroad company can be stopped from carrying passengers and freight, except as regular railroad business. At present 15 cents is charged for passengers who cross the river, the extra 15 cents being charged those also who have passes or mileage.

At Quigley and Quigley's office a reporter was told that nothing in regard to the railroad company's side was ready for publication. These attorneys represent the railroad and will in due time file answers to the petition of the Messrs. Owen.

BLOODY STREET DUEL

Men Shoot Each Other in the Streets of Greenville.

One Dead and Two Cannot Recover, While Others Are Badly Hurt.

TRAGEDY RESULTS FROM FEUD

Greenville, Miss., July 25.—As a result of the renewal of an ancient grudge that had existed between Neil Conley and Ed Schrawber, Conley lies dead at his home tonight.

Schrawber is desperately wounded. Officer Tom Burns is fatally shot, and Captain Quinn, night officer in charge of the police force of the city, is shot through the right hand.

The battle began at 11:40 o'clock on Central avenue, in front of a saloon owned and conducted by Conley. Schrawber was a former member of the police force of Greenville. The bad blood between the two men dates from the latter's connection with the force. Several late pedestrians saw them standing in front of Conley's saloon, and heard a brief, determined colloquy. That which had been expected and feared, and long delayed, soon followed.

The men, as if by common impulse, drew their weapons and opened fire upon each other. The sharp reports of the deadly weapons as they rang out upon the night air attracted the attention of Captain Quinn and Officer Burns, who were around a corner on another street not far from the scene of the combat.

Quinn and Burns hurried to them. The officers warned and admonished the maddened combatants to lower their weapons and submit to arrest. The warnings and admonitions were in vain.

In attempting to separate them the officers mixed in the melee, and the firing became general.

Conley, having emptied his revolver, sank to the sidewalk, gasping a few times and expired with a bullet through his heart.

Burns reeled, and fell to the street, a bullet having entered his side, piercing one of his kidneys and lodging in a vital part of his body.

Schrawber was shot in the arm, and it is believed will die.

THE HOSPITAL.

A Lively Time When the Investigation Begins.

All Concerned Are Laying in Wait for the Other Fellows.

With the management of the city hospital and that of the county poor farm under a cloud, something interesting in connection with the way things are run in McCracken county is promised the taxpayers ere long. City Physician Coyle has reported officially the alleged incompetency of Mrs. Birchett, keeper of the city hospital, and formal charges will be preferred by two councilmen, as required by law, in a few days.

The board of aldermen will meet Monday night to investigate the charge and the investigation will be public. Mrs. Birchett has many friends, and the other side is likewise strongly entrenched, and when the respective sides get through telling what they know the people will likely have something to think about.

IS IT DICK TATE?

Death of a Mysterious Man With a Big Wad of Cash.

It Is Believed from Reports That He Is Kentucky's Missing Treasurer.

PHOTOGRAPHS ARE SENT FOR

Frankfort, Ky., July 25.—A letter received here from lawyers in Los Angeles, Cal., indicate that it is more than probable that an eccentric man, known as Charles Hill, who died there a few days ago, is none other than the absconding state treasurer, James W. Tate, of Kentucky, who has never been heard from since he left the state.

Charles Hill, aged about 80 years, died in Los Angeles. He was unknown save by name. Upon his person was found $2,300 in greenbacks and a key to a bank box at the Union Savings bank, of Los Angeles. The box was found to contain $140,000 in greenbacks. The $142,200 is now being held, and a search for the heirs of the mysterious unknown has been instituted. The descriptions of Charles Hill tally almost exactly as to age and appearance with Tate.

The public administrator in Los Angeles is holding the estate awaiting the proof of the dead man's identity.

A photograph and an accurate description of Tate is asked for by parties who are certain that Hill was an alias, and that Tate was the dead man's real name.

Hill told certain persons he was a schoolmate of Millionaire Rice, who lately died in New York. It is learned that Tate was educated out of the state.

There is some excitement here on account of the possibility of Tate and Hill being the same man.

The California letter states that Hill left no papers save a notebook in cipher, which cannot be translated by anyone who has examined it. The letter was received by a state official.

"Honest Dick" Tate left Kentucky in 1884 with about $300,000 of the commonwealth's cash. He had been treasurer for twenty years. Tate's wife is dead. His daughter collected his life insurance, under the statute providing that seven years' disappearance is counted as death when the fact of death cannot be disproven.

NEITHER WAS TRIED

Two Big Prosecutions Continued by Judge Lightfoot Today.

Many Disappointed Spectators Left the Court House as a Result of the Action.

CASES WILL ATTRACT MANY

There were two important trials scheduled for Judge Lightfoot's court this morning, and there was a large crowd to hear them, but the expectant visitors were disappointed. A number of railroad cases were on, and having been first set, had precedence, and the others were not tried.

The first case was that against Eli Hutchinson, of the lower part of the county, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Henry Gray, near Lovelaceville May 15. Quite a number of witnesses were on hand to testify, and had to return disappointed. The preliminary hearing was postponed until next Wednesday.

The other case was the criminal assault charge against W. B. Padgett, formerly keeper of the county poor farm. Mary Poe, the blind girl who preferred the charge, was on hand, but the other cases consumed so much time that the court set the preliminary trial of Padgett for Monday next.

The girl is being cared for by friends. An effort was made to get her in the Home of the Friendless, but thus far with no success.

A number of men are mentioned for keeper of the poor farm to succeed Padgett. Fiscal court meets tomorrow in called session, and will doubtless ratify the action of County Judge Lightfoot in declaring the place vacant and elect a new keeper, no matter which way the trial may terminate. Judge Lightfoot says he is determined to purge the county institutions, and will see that they are run right.

Both of the above cases are to be hard fought.

Among those mentioned as candidates are: Messrs. Hugh Craft, James Nichols, Bob Wilkins, and two gentlemen named Mason and Thomas.

COL. THOMPSON OUT.

The many friends of Colonel James P. Thompson will be pleased to learn that he is able to be out again, this morning being out for a drive. He has been very ill for several weeks.

DOGS AND CHICKENS

Cause a Shooting in one Locality, but She Didn't Hit the Dog.

Family Disturbance Aired in the Police Court This Morning By Judge Kahn.

SEVERAL CASES DISPOSED OF

Dogs and chickens have caused considerable trouble between the Swift and Sands families near Fourteenth and Court streets. They have had numerous "spats" for the past eight months, according to Mrs. Swift herself, who ought to know because she is usually in them. Yesterday the trouble was somewhat more serious than usual, and Miss Lizzie Sands, a member of the "anti-dog faction," went out in the yard with a pistol that seemed to have been used in the war, according to the Swifts, who own the dog and belong to the "anti-chicken clan. She shot at the dog twice, the weapon sounding like a young cannon, but missed, and said that she'd shoot at "old Mrs. Swift, if she poked her head out." Miss Sands is a very pretty girl, but a poor shot it appears, as she missed the dog both times; yet Mrs. Swift had no uncontrollable desire to poke her head out.

"It was the cutest little dog you ever saw, and jest sat there and wagged his tail as cunning like," she began, but the court smilingly told her she could cut out her observations on the dog.

The evidence was decidedly in favor of the "anti-chicken" contingent, because there was more of it, but finally the case was ended by the warrant for flourishing a pistol being dismissed, and the defendant being fined $5 and costs for shooting inside the city limits. Both women were placed under a $100 bond to keep the peace for 12 months. They are next door neighbors, and would doubtless have been good friends yet if Mrs. Swift's dog had not chased Mrs. Sand's chickens. The young lady's prepossessing appearance won the sympathy of the court, and judgment was suspended until September 1.

Special Judge Kahn had only a few other cases today.

Bob Woods was fined $5 and costs for riding in company with a prostitute. Burns Garner was fined $5 and costs for fighting a young man named Poore.

In a branch of the peace case of Arthur Brigman against Charles McGuire, a fine of $5 and costs was assessed against the former and the other was acquitted.

The adultery charge against Bud Nance and Katie Hite was dismissed.

Charles Bryant was fined $25 and given ten days in jail for carrying a pistol.

The J. M. Hoffman obtaining goods by false pretenses case was continued until tomorrow.

PIANO ATTACHED.

MAN WITH A MORTGAGE SEEKS TO SECURE POSSESSION.

This morning an attachment was taken out against J. Carman and Ed Drennen, attaching a Girardey piano for a debt of $103, to A. Rosengarten, trustee.

The piano had been originally the property of Carman, who lost it through debt to Drennen. Drennen secured the piano for a debt and sold it and the attachment suit was taken out against both parties. The plaintiff in the action had a mortgage on the instrument.

Congressman is Extended Thanks for His Aid to Paducah.

His Efforts have Resulted in Much Good to Paducah in a Commercial Way.

COMMERCIAL CLUB BUSINESS.

The Commercial club held a meeting last night and acted on several important matters.

One resolution was passed asking the Illinois Central to move the dispatcher's office back to Paducah from Princeton, and to run the accommodation train arriving early in the morning from Hopkinsville through to Fulton, and vice versa.

Another resolution was made requesting the Illinois Central to notify the Commercial club's secretary of all changes in freight rates of interest to Paducah shippers as soon as made, as required by the interstate commerce law.

Messrs. W. F. Bradshaw, H. W. Meyers and Sol Dreyfus were appointed a committee to wait on the mayor and ask him to have the law enforced against shooting flobert rifles inside the city limits.

Drs. Hicks and Howell and Architect Lassiter were added to the club's membership.

The following resolution was introduced and passed unanimously:

Whereas, The Honorable C. K. Wheeler, as the representative from the First district of Kentucky in the congress of the United States, has secured from the national government unusual recognition for the said district and city of Paducah, in inducing the honorable secretary of the navy to order one of the two armored cruisers provided for by the present congress to be named Paducah, and

Whereas, Mr. Wheeler has also secured from the present congress a splendid recognition of the commercial importance of the city of Paducah, and the needs of the government's service in said city and the First congressional district in the form of very liberal appropriations for additions to the government building in said city, and

Whereas, Mr. Wheeler has by his unflinching efforts and well directed labors won the attention of those in authority to the pressing necessity of improvements of the navigation of the lower Ohio and Tennessee rivers, and

Whereas, We believe that his labors in that direction have and will be productive of very important results, and

Whereas, Mr. Wheeler's career in congress during his three terms of service has been characterized by an impartial and absolutely conscientious devotion to the interests of his constituents and especially of the city of Paducah, therefore be it Resolved, That the Commercial and Manufacturers' association of Paducah, as a unanimous expression of its membership and in behalf of the citizens of Paducah, does hereby extend to the Honorable C. K. Wheeler hearty thanks for the great honor and many benefits that have come to Paducah and the First congressional district through his labors and influence while an honored member of our national congress, and that the congratulations of the members of this association and of the citizens of Paducah are due to and are hereby extended to him for valuable public service so rendered by him.

Resolved, further, That these resolutions be recorded in the minutes.

THE PERFECT LIVER MEDICINE

Mrs. M. A. Jolley, Noble, O. T., writes: "I have used Herbine for a number of years, and can cheerfully recommend it as the most perfect liver medicine, and the greatest blood purifier. It is a medicine of positive merit, and fully accomplishes all that is claimed for it." Malaria cannot find lodgment in the system while the liver is in perfect order, for one of its functions is to prevent the absorption of fever producing poisons. Herbine is a most efficient liver regulator. 50c at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

County Judge Fisher, at Benton, yesterday afternoon held over Dr. Seitz, a well known physician of Gilbertsville, Marshall county, on a charge of taking undue liberties with the 11 year old girl of a neighbor named Mason. The evidence is not conclusive, but was sufficient to warrant a holding over to the grand jury. The doctor, who has practiced in that section for eighteen years, admitted that he placed his arm about the girl in a fatherly manner.

FIND THE OLD MAN'S WIFE.

A Trip To Mammoth Cave.

(AS SHOWN BY MRS. VICTOR VOIS)

Mammoth Cave, 75 miles south of Louisville—"Until you have seen Nikko, do not say kekko," (grand) the Japs tell us. Until you've seen the Mammoth Cave, the world to you nothing gave, say I.

Old Dame Mother Earth, as if disgusted with the tinsel and gew-gaws of a bedizened outer world, arranged for herself and students of nature an inner space, where the white heat of public detection and the bright light of mundane opinion could be as "a thing apart," and the world named her effort, (which is the largest cavern in the world, being nine miles long.) Mammoth Cave, where "every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

In this underground seclusion, which is rich in elongated tunnels and glittering grottos, intense with myriad of undulations, fairly human in expression, like the phosphorous at sea—the walls are "done" in nature's own tapestries, more effective in results than the most priceless dagdads from the effete East.

Just the first peep into Egyptian darkness confused my senses, and yet my soul, as if begging to be freed from its fetters of conventionality, did cry "en avant," continuing in awe and inspiration at what some magic wand had surely perfected. Out of Nubian blackness come scintillations of reflected lights from effervescing waters in miniature streams hard by, in unrefined places, and so we go on, expecting to become acquainted with those damned souls of Dante's telling. Surely I did catch a vision, which, though preceding me, did actually face me, or was it the sinister shadow of a centaur or gryphon?

Now on to the rhythmic cadence of trickling streams, to the alluring comers oscuras, now in the flash light of our miners' lanterns, or the flambeaux of our guide, now peering over into Kentucky's "Black hole of Calcutta" then agreeing with Romeo "I must away and live, or stay and die." The constant uncertainty of the torches make it all so gruesome and the actual environments make it so interesting. The legitimate expose of curves made the "knickers" necessary evils. The outer air had been Simoon-like in its braveness and tropical in its intensity (we had left the thermometer registering 100 degrees plus, with the accent on the us) and now acquired a speaking acquaintance with 52 degrees pat.

Let the hoi polloi tussle with the barometer, if they care to, but we were exempt from any such concern. Along colonaded vistas of glittering crystal and saline, pedestalled in the stalagmites and stalactites, which the facetious guide told us were called when joined, "mighty tight," we ambitiously wended, the salubrious air caressing my physical longing for pure ozone. How many phenomena are there in store for the faithful pupils of chemistry. A lapidarian joined our party one day and added no little to our general interest in this "feast of reason and flow of soul." Quite alluring is the monotonous sound of lazy pools, or inquisitive puddles or of tiny rivulets threading out between strata of adamantine compositions, and of graceful streams serpentine-like on the level ground of these fallen latitudes. No human agent can lift up the soul to the heights of admiration and passive awe like nature in these purlieus. There is a hope, a stoic calmness which no words can depict, and yet at such a moment, one half expects to collide with maddening convulsion of noisy waters, satanic in inspiration, or even with a gnome or ogre from the nether world. The environments are so contradictory that my local nature became a veritable Jekyll and Hyde. At one moment, as if under the charm of the languid river Lethe or breathing the seductive poppy juice, then keenly on the alert to add to my mental herbarium, which if ever fresh and fructiferous, had surely become a hortus siccus. I listened to our well coached guide—and understood not—but it was "Saturday—be lazy, for Saturn loves his ease." Like Lord Byron, we all have moments of idleness.

Oh, Mammoth Cave! You certainly have your thirty points of perfection. In one recess there is a quasi-perfect arm chair; hard by a miniature spring, which by sympathy of its size, shape and proximity to the old chair, is called "grandfather's cuspidore." The most wonderful scenic effect is gathered near this place, as the guide deftly tosses a flambeau back of him and attracts the audience, who are surprised to see, most minutely outlined, a perfect statue, carved in relief, formed by the shapes of the rocks combined with the Rembrandt effect from the lights. All is utter darkness, save the bold white marble-like statue of Martha Washington, perfectly proportioned, about ten feet in height.

A life-sized bust of Shakespeare hangs over the pedestrian a little further on. The Raleigh ruff is fluted in exact corrugations, as if chiseled by hand. In a grotto high above the ordinary road, there is, as if actually in-laid, a piece of chromatic saline substance resembling perfectly a tempting slice of bacon. And thus it always is—where there is Shakespeare there must be some Bacon!

The Star Chamber is possibly the most wonderful result of what nature and art can accomplish. The guide leaves his party in a huge space, resembling in proportions an auditorium. By deft placing of lights, in consonance with the peculiarly studied ceiling, stars are made to appear as if the veritable canopy of heaven is the actual covering. The horizon is symmetrically outlined. The reverberated sounds are quite musical there. "Fat Man's Misery" is formed by irregular rocks in parallels, not more than a foot across. It is a sort of ladder, the pebbled walls being not more than three feet high. The river Styx was next in our meet, but Charon not being present, we did not row over.

A sort of pulpit is formed at one place by a freak of nature, with hard earth and some gypsum formations, where many romantic couples have achieved the culmination of their dreams, but the guide, always ready for levity as well as the serious, told us that no more marriages would be allowed there. In answer to the "Why?" we learned that "marriage had already been run into the ground too much."

A large hole, apparently leading to some place, attracted attention, and one of us asked: "Guide, where does that hole go to?" We were told that it went nowhere; that it had been right there for 100 years. In the 1812 war there was considerable labor going on in the cave, the prints of the oxen's hoofs are plainly visible in certain places yet.

The cave was discovered in 1802, and many suggest that it would be a fit century celebration to institute electric lights all through. I think that would mar the honest naturalness of the place, the thorough unexpectedness is one of its chief charms.

We passed many leaching vats, where percolation had been instituted during the war, the interstices being completely indistinguishable. It has become quite a fad to throw a stone en passant on the mounds. Each state, many colleges and several "frats" have cave monuments started in this way. Each is plainly labelled, and some have assumed proportions to astonishing degrees. Kentucky, strange to say, is one of the small est.

The day we indulged in the "long route" (eighteen miles) luncheon was sent in to us from the hotel; a Lucullus himself never banqueted more copiously than did we hungry souls on boiled eggs, fried chicken and sandwiches. I wonder if Bacchus were admitted to the catacombs? The sisters fate certainly served us from the horn of plenty. We had accumulated no fatigue, strange to say, but we were bruised and sore and hungry. Yet who wouldn't be a cave dweller? After a rest we started on in the ruggedness, coming suddenly upon the Echo river again; it is nearly a mile long, and about 200 yards wide; is a subterranean branch of the Green river. When the latter rises the Echo river completely changes its course.

We were poled down this Echo river in a sort of barge, midst solid walls and covering of rocks which we did just escape, as we bent over half the time, or sat down completely in the floor of the skiff. The guide ambidexterously managed with cunning born of long practice. We were requested to sing, this being a clever ruse that we might escape the unnoticed monotony. Shall I tell you that with one accord, without any hesitancy we all began "Nearer My God to Thee?"

The terminus of this long route is what is called "the corkscrew," and has only been discovered in rather recent years, by means of which a mile and a half are cut off, but next time, (only I think "this apple won't have any core") I'll take the extra mile and a half.

We had climbed so many wooden ladders that we felt eligible as firemen. So many rocks had piled under our feet, that we ascertained rock pile education, and our hands had suffered so many knocks that we seemed to know not the art of "manicuring."

The trip from here to Glasgow Junction only necessitates four changes. One of our party said, "I feel some like a traveling man, 'making' so many different towns a day." Life itself seems less intense since

I've been to this cave, because that place seems more a riddle than life itself. The fact that we do breathe and have our beings is a part of life itself, as we take it all for granted, but the utter mightiness of that cavern so paralyzes my mind that with this much telling I find myself still unexpressed. Go, see for yourself, for "seeing is believing." Says the "blue grass region" to the "penny-rile district." Come and see the eighth wonder of the world, the first wonder of it in the United States. Says Nature to Art, "See that hump!" "CHAPPIE."

THE RIVER NEWS.

Observations taken at 7 a. m. River 13.8 on the gauge, a fall of 0.3 in last 24 hours. Wind northeast, a light breeze. Weather part cloudy and warm. Temperature 74.

Pell. Observer.

Captain H. Baker is in St. Louis today.

The Mary Stewart is due from Golconda today.

The Bowle is still laying up awaiting orders.

The Joe Fowler arrived late from Evansville today.

The Avalon is due from Cincinnati to Memphis Sunday.

The Lyda went up the Tennessee river this morning for ties.

The Woolfolk arrived from the Mississippi this morning with logs.

The Sunshine will pass up to Cincinnati from Memphis this afternoon.

The Kenton went to the mines yesterday and is due back within a few days.

The Buttorff was taken off the ways yesterday and the Delta is being pulled out today for repairs.

The Jim Duffey, Jr., is due tomorrow from the Tennessee river with ties for the Ayer and Lord people.

The Dick Fowler departed on time this morning for Cairo. She will take out an excursion to that place Sunday.

Mr. L. P. Holland, the chief inspector of the Ayer and Lord Tie Co., is ill today and unable to leave his bed.

The Tennessee arrived this morning for Tennessee river and will leave on her return trip tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock.

The Clifton passed the city this morning at 8 o'clock for St. Louis to Tennessee river with a big crowd of round trip passengers.

With her cabin full of passengers a nice cargo of merchandise, the City of Clifton passed up last night for Tennessee river. Nearly all her passengers are tourists who will visit the battlefield of Shiloh and other points of historic interest.

The new steamer City of Savannah, just built by Howard for the St. Louis and Tennessee River Packet Co., will leave Louisville Saturday. She is a splendid business boat, and has a handsome cabin. Captain Koger says "she is it," and he knows a good boat when he sees one.

The warship Michigan, smashed by a collision at Erie on the lakes, was built at Pittsburgh in 1838. She is of iron and the plates were hauled across the country to where she was constructed at Erie by wagons, as there were no railroads in that section at the time mentioned. She carried eight guns, and was the only war steamer on the lakes.

With a flood in the upper Mississippi and another good rise in the upper Ohio, a good stage of water may be looked for for some time to come, especially in the Mississippi from Cairo to the Gulf. Fifteen boats with about 5,000,000 bushels of coal left Pittsburgh Tuesday, being the biggest single day's shipment of coal on record. This is the third or fourth run of coal made in the last 60 days, something unprecedented in the history of coal shipments.

Mr. Will Baker and wife and Mrs. Fannie Baker, his mother, left this morning for Dawson and other points in Kentucky.

MORE OFFICIAL NEGLECT.

The officials composing the council,
now the general council taking both boards together, are expected to at all times protect the city's interest. One thing exacted in many cases is a bond.
We have police bonds, saloon bonds, wagon bonds, brick street bonds and countless other kinds of bonds, yet no one was ever known to be able to recover anything on one. Recently when the bond protecting the city in a hose purchase was sought, after it had been discovered that the hose had utterly failed to come up to representations or requirements, it could not be found. It was in the custody of some of the officials and its disappearance is due to some one's negligence.
As a result, even if the bond was ever worth anything, the city has paid ninety cents a foot for hose that did not last three years, and now finds itself compelled to grin and bear it.
Furthermore, it has turned around and bought more hose from the same company that has already swindled it once, the hose furnished it before having burst repeatedly within the past two weeks, until there is little, if any, left.

Some time ago, when the contract
for building four blocks of brick street was ready to be let, the council gave the job to inexperienced men in preference to men of undoubted competency, because the former made the city a guarantee to keep the sidewalks and street in repair for a period of five years. The bid of the others was lower, but the council decided not to save the taxpayers the difference between the two bids, in order to get the guarantee. The people now can walk up and down Broadway and see what the bond and guarantee amounted to. The material used was inferior, the workmanship bad, and the job when completed such that the council that ordered it refused to

The modern problem in every branch of the commerce is to have no dull time in the year; no period which will not at least pay its proportion of expenses.

receive it or pay the balance on it.
It is true that things have changed
recently, and friends of the contractor have broken into office again, and he may be permitted to do anything he chooses. He won his suit for the balance on the contract, and his friends in office decided to pay the judgment and not fight it any further in the courts.

Meanwhile the people are wondering what became of the bond he gave for the faithful performance of the work, and where the guarantee is that he gave to keep the job in good repair for five years if they are in existence, why is not something done towards enforcing them? If there was none, why was there none? If the job was too bad when finished to be received by the council that had no scruples against letting it as it did, in what way has it improved since? It is high time the authorities were trying to force the contractor to comply with his agreement. The pavements have been in bad repair in places for months, and those whose duty it is to have such things attended to have ignored the fact. The people are not disposed to forever submit to officers betraying the public for the sake of personal friendship.

And it is high time somebody was investigating the official bond question, and testing a few of them, if necessary, in the courts.

A handsome memorial has been sent to Mrs. Mr. McKinley by the Manufacturers Association of Baltimore, in the form of a beautifully engrossed copy of the resolutions passed by the association at the time of President McKinley's death. The memorial is in the form of an album, and is handsomer bound in black seal leather.
The volume is 10 1-2 inches wide by 14 1-2 long, and is lined with heavy silk. On the cover in gilt letters is the inscription "In Memory of William McKinley." The book contains ten heavy Bristol board pages. In the center of the first page is a well executed picture of the late President,
the result of most careful penmanship.
To the right is a view of the capitol
at Washington, and below the portrait is a picture of the American flag furled, with the coat of arms of the state directly beneath it. The other nine pages are devoted to the "resolutions adopted by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association in respect to the memory of William McKinley, president of the United States." Mrs.
McKinley has received a great many such tokens of the universal esteem in which her husband was held, but none more beautiful than this one.

A Missouri man went out to Washington state the other day. He wanted to be "sighted" as most Missourians do, and a stranger who had made himself agreeable "showed" him a lock lying on the ground. About the time they picked it up and started examining it, a cop—a bogus boy,—came up and pulled them for gambling. It was then time for the man from Missouri to do some "sighting," and he put up a $200 bond until the next day. The two bunco men have not been seen since, and neither has the man from Missouri been seen—in Washington state.

Judge Taft has received nothing but praise for the success of his trip to Rome, and it is generally admitted in the latter place that nothing but positive advantage has resulted from his visit. A prominent cardinal is quoted as having said that the friar question is now settled, and that before negotiations are resumed in Manila two months hence, all of the friars will have vanished from the Philippines.

The Illinois Central is to build extensive shops in Memphis, and make many other improvements there, but the elation of Fulton, Ky., over the imaginary possibility of the railroad locating shops there is rather premature, if not entirely unjustified. With shops at Paducah, Jackson and Memphis, there will be no excuse for the location of shops at Fulton.

One hundred and twenty-five of the government buildings to be erected out of recent appropriations are to be erected from competitive designs, the competition to be open to all the architects in the country. The government is to erect 185 new buildings in all, and the total cost will be $52,- 000,000. We are growing some.

This government is preparing to coin the St. Louis exposition souvenirs, but the design has not been selected. The Chicago World's Fair souvenirs were coined at a cost of about four cents and sold at twenty-five cents, hence there is big profit in them.

Speaking of the sale of franchises
Hopkinsville yesterday sold a telephone franchise for $3. There was only one other bid, $2. Evidently no one wanted a franchise very badly.

Why is it necessary for the Commercial club to ask the mayor to have the Florent rifle or any other law enforced?
What are the police for?

It seems that when officials fall out the public learns a thing or two about how things are being run at the people's expense.

SWORN IN TODAY

Chief Collins Will not Take Charge,
However, Until Aug 1.

He Explains That His Appointment
Costs but $15 a Month More.

The newly appointed chief of police, Officer James Collins, was today sworn in by City Clerk Patterson, but does not enter into the discharge of his duties until August 1. His appointment by the board of fire and police commissioners was last night ratified by the aldermanic board, the council having ratified it Monday, although neither was necessary. His bondsmen were accepted, and are:
Messrs. Louis Kolb, Mike Iseman and Louis Clark.

Chief Collins will assume entire charge of the police force, both day and night, August 1, and intends to inaugurate some changes in regulations not yet fully decided on. He will collect none of the fees that are his under the second class charter, allowing them to go to Marshal Crow, and as he is to be paid but $75 a month, his appointment, he explains, will cost the city but $15 a month more than is now being paid, it having been decided not to appoint any officer on the force to succeed him.

NO DECISION IN THE CASE.

The case of Willis Morgan against the Caldwell Coal Co., was tried in Justice Barber's court this morning, but as yet the magistrate has not rendered a decision. Morgan, who is a watchman, made a contract with several coal dealers to watch their yards, and claims that the Caldwell Coal Co., with whom he has a contract, failed to pay in accordance to the contract, and sued for about $25.

Mr. Michel has been seeing after this class of work in the associations and paid Paducah a visit as he was near the city. The reception last night was well attended and the musical program was well received. Refreshments were served and it proved one of the most successful receptions ever given at the association. Several of Paducah's best musicians, vocal and instrumental, were on the program.

Alleged that the Poor Farm Has Been a Lewd Resort.

County Judge Lightfoot this afternoon issued the following notice, which was served on Keeper Padgett, of the poor farm, and indicates that a pretty state of affairs has existed at the institution lately.

"McCracken fiscal court.—To W. B. Padgett, keeper McCracken county poor house—You are hereby notified that the fiscal court of McCracken county has been called in special session to meet at McCracken county court house on July 26, 1902, at 10 o'clock a. m. to inquire into the complaint against you as keeper of the McCracken county poor house, wherein you are accused of permitting divers lewd and disreputable characters, not inmates of said poor house, to assemble and congregate and carry on and practice immorality and depravity. At which time you are hereby notified to appear.

"R. T. LIGHTFOOT,
"County Judge."

The prospects are that Padgett will have to go, whether the charge of criminal assault is proven or not. This morning an examination was made of the Poe girl by several physicians, and they claim that she was never mistreated as she claims, indicating that the story is false in part, at least.

THE HOSE CONTRACT.

The fire committee is this afternoon receiving bids and examining samples of fire hose at the city hall. The bids will probably not be opened until Tuesday.

STEWART RESIGNS.

SCROFULA

I bequeath to my children Scrofula with all its attendant horrors, humiliation and suffering. This is a strange legacy to leave to posterity; a heavy burden to place upon the shoulders of the young.

This treacherous disease dwarfs the body and hinders the growth and development of the faculties, and the child born of blood poison, or scrofula-tainted parentage, is poorly equipped for life's duties.

Scrofula is a disease with numerous and varied symptoms; enlarged glands or tumors about the neck and armpits, catarrh of the head, weak eyes and dreadful skin eruptions upon different parts of the body show the presence of tubercular or scrofulous matter in the blood. This dangerous and stealthy disease entrenches itself securely in the system and attacks the bones and tissues, destroys the red corpuscles of the blood, resulting in white swelling, a pallid, waxy appearance of the skin, loss of strength and a gradual wasting away of the body.

S. S. S. combines both purifying and tonic properties, and is guaranteed entirely vegetable, making it the ideal remedy in all scrofulous affections. It purifies the deteriorated blood, makes it rich and strong and a complete and permanent cure is soon effected. S. S. S. improves the digestion and assimilation of food, restores the lost properties to the blood and quickens the circulation, bringing a healthy color to the skin and vigor to the weak and emaciated body.

Write us about your case and our physicians will cheerfully advise and help you in every possible way to regain your health. Book on blood and skin diseases free.

THE GREAT K&A TRAIN ROBBERY.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD.

THE HONORABLE PETER STIRLING EW

COPYRIGHT, 1936, BY J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY

"And where'll you be, Mr. Gordon?" asked the man.

"Is there any place about here that's a safe hiding spot for a few hours?" I asked. "I want to stay till I'm sure those letters are safe, and after that I'll steal on board the first train that comes along."

"Then you'll want to be near here," said the man. "I'll tell you—I've got just the place for you. The platform's boarded in all round, but I noticed one plank that's loose at one end, right at this high corner, and if you just pry it open enough to get in and then pull the board in place they'll never find you."

"That will do," I said, "and when the letters are safe come out on the platform, walk up and down once, bang the door twice, and then say, 'That local freight is late.' And if you get a chance tell one of the Cullens where I'm hidden."

I crossed the platform boldly, jumped down and walked away. But after going 50 feet I dropped down on my hands and knees and crawled back. Inside of two minutes I was safely stowed away under the platform in about as neat a hiding place as a man could ask. In fact, if I had only had my wits enough about me to borrow a revolver of the man, I could have made a pretty good defense, even if discovered.

Underneath the platform was loose gravel, and as an additional precaution I scooped out, close to the side boarding, a trough long enough for me to lie in. Then I got into the hole, shoveled the sand over my legs and piled the rest up in a heap close to me, so that by a few sweeps of my arm I could cover my whole body, leaving only my mouth and nose exposed, and those below the level. That made me feel pretty safe, for, even if the cowboys found the loose plank and crawled in, it would take uncommon good eyesight in the darkness to find me. I had hollowed out my living grave to fit, and if I could have smoked I should have been decidedly comfortable. Sleep I dared not indulge in, and the sequel showed that I was right in not allowing myself that luxury.

I hadn't much more than comfortably settled myself and let thoughts of a cigar and a nap flit through my mind when a row up the street showed that the jail breaking had been discovered. Then followed shouts and confusion for a few moments, while a search was being organized. I heard some horsemen ride over the tracks, and also down the street, followed by the hurried footsteps of half a dozen men. Some banged at the doors of the specials, while others knocked at the station door.

One of the Cullens' servants opened the door of 218, and I heard the sheriff's voice telling him he'd got to search the car. The darky protested, saying that the "gentleman was all away and only de miss inside." The row brought Miss Cullen to the door, and I heard her ask what was the matter.

"Sorry to trouble you, miss," said the sheriff, "but a prisoner has broken jail, and we've got to look for him."

"Escaped?" cried Madge joyfully.

"How?"

"That's just what gets away with me," said the sheriff. "My idea is"—

"Don't waste time on theories," said Camp's voice angrily. "Search the car."

"Sorry to discommode a lady," said the sheriff gallantly, "but if we may just look around a little?"

"My father and brothers went out a few minutes ago," said Madge hesitatingly, "and I don't know if they would be willing."

Camp laughed angrily and said, "Stand aside there."

"Don't you worry," said the sheriff. "If he's on the car, he can't get away. We'll send a feller up for Mr. Cullen, while we search Mr. Gordon's car and the station."

They set about it at once and used up ten minutes in the task. Then I heard Camp say:

"Come, we can't wait all night for permission to search this car. Go ahead."

"I hope you'll wait till my father comes," said Madge.

"Now go slow, Mr. Camp," said the sheriff. "We mustn't discomfort the lady if we can avoid it."

"I believe you're wasting time in order to help him escape," sputtered Camp, so angry as hardly to be able to articulate. "If you won't do your duty, I'll take the law into my own hands and order the car searched."

"Nothin' of the kind," said the sheriff. "But when a female is in question a gentleman, Mr. Camp—yes, sir, a gentleman—is in duty bound to be per-lite."

"Politeness be ———" cried

Camp.

"Git angry as you like," said the sheriff wrathfully, "but — me if any — cuss has a right to use such — talk in the presence of a lady!"

CHAPTER XIV.

"LISTENERS NEVER HEAR ANYTHING GOOD."

Before I had ceased chuckling over the sheriff's indignant declaration of the canons of etiquette I heard Mr. Cullen's voice demanding to know what the trouble was. It was quickly explained to him that I had escaped. He at once gave them permission to search his car and went in with the sheriff and the cowboys. Apparently Madge went in, too, for in a moment I heard Camp say in a low voice:

"Two of you fellows get down below the car and crawl in under the truck where you can't be seen. Evidently that cuss isn't here, but he's likely to come by and by. If so, nab him if you can, and if you can't fire two shots. Mosely, are you heeled?"

"Do I chaw terbaccy?" asked Mosely ironically, clearly insulted at the suggestion that he would travel without a gun.

"Then keep a sharp lookout and listen to everything you hear, especially the whereabouts of some letters. If you can spot their lay, crawl out and get word to me at once. Now, under you go before they come out."

I heard two men drop into the gravel close alongside of where I lay and then crawl under the truck of 218. They weren't a moment too soon, for the next instant I heard two or three people jump on to the platform and Albert Cullen's voice drawl, "Aw, by Jove, what's the row?" Camp not enlightening them, Lord Ralles suggested that they get on the car to find out, and the three did so. A moment later the sheriff came to the door and told Camp that I was not to be found.

"I told you this was the last place to look for the cuss, Mr. Camp," he said. "We've just discommode the lady for nothin'."

"Then we must search elsewhere," said Camp. "Come on, boys."

The sheriff turned and made another elaborate apology for having had to trouble the lady.

I heard Madge tell him that he hadn't troubled her at all, and then, as the cowboys and Camp walked off, she added, "And, Mr. Gunton, I want to thank you for reproving Mr. Camp's swearing."

"Thank you, miss," said the sheriff. "We fellows are a little rough at times, but we know what's due to a lady."

"Papa," said Madge as soon as he was out of hearing, "the sheriff is the most beautiful swearer I ever heard."

For awhile there was silence round the station. I suppose the party in 218 were comparing notes, while the two cowboys and I had the best reasons for being quiet. Presently, however, the men came out of the car and jumped on to the platform. Madge evidently followed them to the door, for she called, "Please let me know the moment anything happens or you learn something."

"Better go to bed, Madge," Albert called. "You'll only worry, and it's after 3."

"I couldn't sleep if I tried," she answered.

Their footsteps died away in a moment, and I heard her close the door of 218. In a few moments she opened it again, and, stepping down to the station platform, began to pace up and down it. If I had only dared, I could have put my finger through the crack of the planks and touched her foot as she walked over my head, but I was afraid it might startle her into a shriek, and there was no explaining to her what it meant without telling the cowboys how close they were to their quarry.

Madge hadn't walked from one end of the platform to the other more than three or four times when I heard some one coming. She evidently heard it also, for she said:

"I began to be afraid you hadn't understood me."

"I thought you told me to see first if I were needed," said a voice that even the distance and the planks did not prevent me from recognizing as that of Lord Ralles.

"Yes," said she. "You are sure you can be spared?"

"I couldn't be of the slightest use," said Ralles, getting on to the platform and joining Madge. "It's as black as ink everywhere, and I don't think there's anything to be done till daylight."

"Then I'm glad you came back, for I really want to say something—to ask the greatest favor of you."

"You only have to tell me what it is," said his lordship.

"Even that is very hard," said Madge. "If—if— Oh, I'm afraid, I haven't the courage after all."

"It'll be glad to do anything I can."

"It's—well—oh, dear, I can't. Let's walk a little, while I think how to put it."

They began to walk, which took a weight off my mind, as I had been forced to hear every word said thus far and was dreading what might follow, since I was perfectly helpless to warn them. The platform was built around the station and in a moment they were out of hearing.

Before many seconds were over, however, they had walked round the building, and I heard Lord Ralles say:

"You really don't mean that he's insulted you?"

"That is just what I do mean," cried Madge indignantly. "It's been almost past endurance. I haven't dared to tell any one, but he had the cruelty, the meanness, on Hance's trail to threaten that—"

At that point the walkers turned the corner again, and I could not hear the rest of the sentence. But I had heard more than enough to make me grow hot with mortification, even while I could hardly believe I had understood aright. Madge had been so kind to me lately that I couldn't think she had been feeling as bitterly as she spoke. That such an apparently frank girl was a consummate actress wasn't to be thought, and yet—I remembered how well she had played her part on Hance's trail. But even that wouldn't convince me. Proof of her duplicity came quickly enough, for while I was still thinking the walkers were round again, and Lord Ralles was saying:

"Why haven't you complained to your father or brothers?"

"Because I knew they would resent his conduct to me, and"—

"Of course they would," cried her companion, interrupting. "But why should you object to that?"

"Because of the letters," said Madge. "Don't you see that if we made him angry he would betray us to Mr. Camp and"—

Then they passed out of hearing, leaving me almost desperate both at being an eavesdropper to such a conversation and that Madge could think so meanly of me. To say it, too, to Lord Ralles made it cut all the deeper, as any fellow who has been in love will understand.

Round they came again in a moment, and I braced myself for the lash of the whip that I felt was coming. I didn't escape it, for Madge was saying:

"Can you conceive of a man pretending to care for a girl and yet treating her so? I can't tell you the grief, the mortification, I have felt." She spoke with a half sob in her throat, as if she was struggling not to cry, which made me wish I had never been born. "It's been all I could do to control myself in his presence—I have come so utterly to hate and despise him," she added.

"I don't wonder," said Lord Ralles. "My only surprise is"—

With that they passed out of hearing again, leaving me fairly desperate with shame, grief, and, I'm afraid, with anger. I felt at once guilty and yet wronged. I knew I had been ungentlemanly on the trail, but I had done my best to retrieve my conduct and was running big risks, both present and eventual, for Madge's sake. Yet here she was acknowledging that thus far she had used me as a puppet, while all the time disliking me. It was a terrible blow, made all the harder by the fact that she was proving herself such a different girl from the one I loved—so different, in fact, that, despite what I had heard, I couldn't quite believe it of her and found myself seeking to extenuate and even justify her conduct. While I was doing this they came within hearing, and Lord Ralles was speaking.

"—with you," he said. "But I still do not see what I can do, however much I may wish to serve you."

"Can't you go to him and insist that he—or tell him what I really feel toward him—or anything, in fact, to shame him? I really can't go on acting longer."

That reached the limit of my endurance, and I crawled from my burrow, intending to get out from under that platform whether I was caught or not. I knew it was a foolish move—after having heard what I had a little more or less was quite immaterial. But I entirely forgot my danger in the sting of what Madge had said, and my one thought was to stand face to face with her long enough to—I'm sure I don't know what I did intend to say.

Just as I had got to the plank, however, I heard Lord Ralles ask:

"Who's that?"

"It's me," said a voice, "the station agent." Then I heard a door close. Some one walked out to the center of the platform and remarked:

"That 'ere local freight is late."

At least the letters were recovered.
